F80

MODEL NUMBER: F80

Conceived as the mass production prototype for the entire F90 series, this versatile unit incorporates critical performance data gathered from field operations of the original F90. Its refined architecture maintains compatibility with virtually all mission packs previously engineered for its predecessor. The design was handled by SNRI's NAMSU Labs, with production carried out by Zimmad Corporation.

GUNDAM F90

MODEL NUMBER: F90

SNRI's flagship compact mobile suit represents a breakthrough in miniaturization technology. Standing at a mere 14.8m in height, it achieves an impressive 18% reduction compared to the iconic RX-78 Gundam's towering 18.0m frame. Featuring an innovative full-body hardpoint system, this engineering marvel can be reconfigured with 26 distinct mission packs (designated A through Z), transforming it into the definitive adaptive weapons platform capable of dominating any combat scenario.

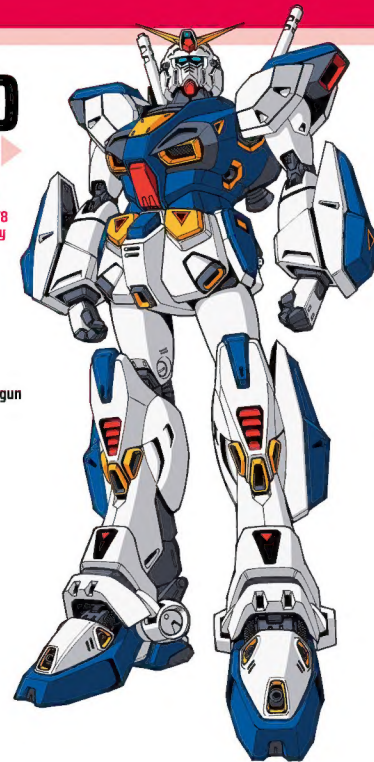

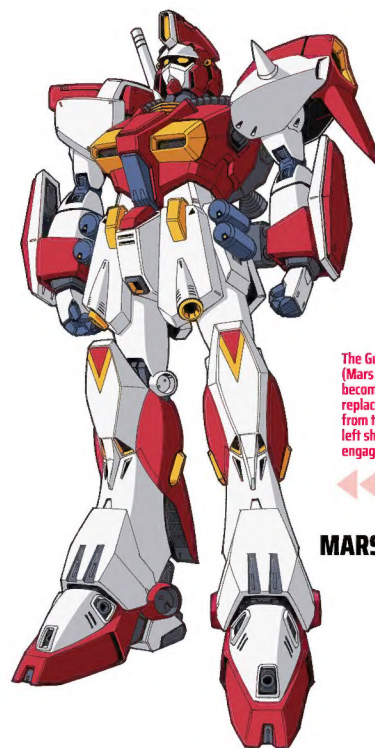

Head Height: 14.8m

Full Weight: 17.8t

Generator Output: 3,160kW

Thruster Propulsion: 74,760kg

Preliminary Armaments: beam rifle, beam saber, vulcan gun

The Gundam F90 Unit 2, after its dramatic capture by the Oldsmobile Forces (Mars Independent Zeon Forces), underwent extensive modification to become the Crimson Gundam. Nearly 80% of its external components were replaced during this overhaul, with several hardpoints deliberately removed from the original design. The distinctive spike armor assembly mounted on its left shoulder provides a devastating advantage during close-quarters engagements. Its pilot is Lieutenant Bosch Weller.
